CENTRALIZATION OF GOVERNMENT HERE CONDEMNED

Lowden Tells Kentucky Bar Association Right of States in Danger of Dissipation by Indiscriminate Constitution Amendments

By Associated Press.

COVINGTON, Ky., July 6.—The rapid movement toward centralization of power at Washington must be checked or the value of the "federal principle," which assumes that the Union is made up of a group of "indestructable states," will be dissipated forever. Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and Republican aspirant for president in the convention which selected Warren G. Harding, declared here today in an address before the Kentucky Bar Association.

Fear that America is entering upon "an era of indiscriminate amendments to our federal Constitution" also was expressed by Mr. Lowden. Formerly, he said, it was almost with a feeling of awe that we approached the question of considering a change in that great instrument" but first today there is a tendency to regard the amendment of the Constitution as of little more ment than the enactment of a statute.

Mr. Lowden, in his opening remarks traced the events of the last few years during which "throngs have crumbled, dynasties have fallen, new nations have been born, and the map of Europe has been redrawn." He then recount told of the framing of the Constitution.

"There is no country in all the ed the development of this country and world in which the well being of the everage man and woman, and the little child as we have so greatly and so continuously improved as in America. And this though for the most part in our history we have clung to the idea that ours was an 'indissoluble union of indestructible states'. Why should we abandon that doctrine now?

"Among the rights guarded in the Constitution is the right of property. I know it is becoming unpopular to speak of property. Men have come to discuss property as though it were a mere thing, unconnected with the life of man. Of course, property in itself can have no rights; but surely man can have rights in property, if such rights are essential to the welfare of mankind. Who can doubt that this is so? There has never been a civilization in the history of the world that did not have its beginning in the recognition of man's right to the product of his own labor, whether of the hand or brain.

"There are those who speak of the nationalization of wealth as something new. It is the oldest thing in the history of the world. The savage tribes, in every land and clime, have been communists. Our own Indian tribes for centuries had nationalized their wealth. They enjoyed their lands and almost everything else in common. The prairies over which they roamed and which they claimed by tribal titles remained but hunting grounds.

"Private property must remain if civilization is to go on, and the more people who own the higher will that civilization be. Our concern should be not to destroy private property, but to distribute it more widely and more equitably. The path must be kept open for the young man of brains to pass from laborer to owner of the farm. The way must be made clear for the worker in industry and commerce to have a fair share in the profits he creates. Men must be brought into more kindly relations with the raw materials and the forces of nature with which they work. This can be done only when men cooperate with one another in production, and thus become into better relations with one another. The great organizing genius at the head of industry and the humblest worker in the field are jointly laboring to produce something for the use of the happiness of mankind. Unless they both get satisfaction from their work, they both have failed. That satisfaction is impossible unless there is hearty good will and sympathy between them. We must somehow to bring about that good will. The first step to this end is to make it certain that each is derived from this joint product the just share of his contribution to it.

"For years there had been an effort on the part of some writers to disparage the framers of the Constitution. I think they might have been engaged on a better task.

"However, even if all they have said about those framers of the Constitution is that is aside from the question. For constitution speaks for itself. Under humanity has had a larger opportunity and a greater happiness than under any other government in modern times. Under it more happy homes have flourished, a finer manhood and womanhood have been nourished, than under any government in the flood of time. The Constitution is worth preserving—not to perpetuate the fame of its founders—but because it is the greatest political document of time."

Patents for annual winding clocks have been granted John C. Burke and about six different models of these are being made. The clocks strike the hours and half-hours throughout the year and some are equipped with daily alarm attachment.

The spring and master wheel are very little larger than those of the eight-day clocks. The movement is so geared, however, that one turn of the master wheel runs the clock for forty days. When it is wound up it will run for 400 days, though a "wind" sign appears on the dial as a reminder after it has run a year. It is equipped with the very best regulating devices and a patent plate at the back enables it to be opened there is case of trouble.

Though Mr. Burke's inventive genius usually manifests itself in perfecting or creating time-pieces, he has shown his versatility by making a burglar-proof night latch. It is a small article made of brass with a movable catch which keeps the door fastened in case the lock is turned. He has applied for a patent on this.

[illegible] BURNS AT NICHOLSON THIS AFTERNOON

Origin of Fire Unknown—Several Thousand Dollars Loss At Mine Belonging to J. P. Kivett Of Tazewell

TRESTLE AND CAMP HOUSES THREATENED

A fire at Beech Creek Coal company, Nicholson, this afternoon, completely destroyed the tipple and coal washer, there and, at 3 o'clock, was still threatening the trestle and camp buildings, though the worst of the fire had been extinguished. The origin of the fire was unknown. The mine belongs to J. P. Kivett of Tazewell. The loss will run into several thousand dollars, very little of which was covered by insurance.

The fire broke out about 12:30 o'clock, while the tipple was empty, the men all being at dinner. Several theories for its origin have been advanced spontaneous combustion and deficient wiring being the most common. It is not thought that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

The tipple had been thoroughly overhauled inside yesterday. This might have promoted combustion and it was fire. The tipple was entirel afire al-fire. The tipple was entirely afire almost before any one noticed it.

A corps of about a dozen worker fought the fire valiantly, carrying water from the creek which flows under the trestle at that spot. Mr. Kivet was on hands fighting the fire the entire time.

The mine has not been running for several days. It regularly employs about seventy-five men. For the past month only twenty-five or thirty men had been working.

Luckily for the Nicholson camp today, there was no wind. If there had been the fire would undoubtedly have taken the trestle and spread through the camp houses and office buildings, all of which are grouped together.

BLAME WHISKY IN HARLAN SUICIDE

Young Man Shoots Woman, Then Kills Self in Louisville Wednesday Night

LOUISVILLE July 6.—A moonshine whiskey-befuddled brain was blamed by the police for the tragedy at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday night at the Liberty Hotel, Sixth and Liberty streets, in which John M. Gilbert, 28 years old, of Harlan, Ky., member of the junior class of the Louisville College of Pharmacy, shot and seriously wounded Mrs May Thompson, 25, waitress at the Home Restaurant 317 South Third street, and then ended his life by firing a bullet through his heart.

In the room, which had been occupied two weeks by the couple, who were registered as J. M. Martin and wife, Harlan, Ky. and which was in disorder, Chief of Detectives A. E Larkin found many empty whisky bottles.

Physicians at the City Hospital said that Mrs Thompson's wounds, while serious were not necessarily fatal. She has wounds in the right shoulder, chest and leg.

At the City Hospital today Mrs Thompson said that the shooting was the outgrowth of a quartel resulting from Gilbert's jealousy. She did not learn until yesterday that he had taken his own life.

Referring to Gilbert as "poor kid, he was a nice fellow," the wounded woman denied that she had been in the room with him, saying she had gone to the hotel to see him Wednesday night and that the argument started in the hall on the third floor. He began shooting as she started down the steps, she told. Mrs. Thompson denied that she had ever lived with Gilbert. He had often spoken to her of marriage but she would not marry him, she said. He was so jealous of her that he did not want other men to look at her.

"He had been drinking," said Mrs. Thompson. "He told me he was going to leave me and was going home. I answered that I did not care. This angered him. He drew his pistol and began firing."

The statement of Mrs. Thompson that Gilbert contemplated returning home soon was borne out by his brother in law James E Cooke, a graduate of the Louisville College of Pharmacy. He said that he last saw Gilbert Tuesday at which time Gilbert asked him to purchase him a pullman ticket to Harlan, which he did. Mr. Cooley said that he had not known where Gilbert was stopping or of his associations with Mrs. Thompson.

In a long distance telephone message today Sheriff A. H. Blair of Harlan said that John M. Gilbert, formerly of that city was a son of W. M Gilbert, who sells newspaper. He said the young man bore a good reputation in Harlan, which he left five years ago to attend school. Sheriff Blair was of the impression that Gilbert had worked in a drug store in Louisville.

Besides his parents the victim is survived by several half-brothers and half-sisters, among them being D. Jas. Jones, of Norton and Carter Jones, Sheriff Blair said. The body will be taken to Harlan for burial, according to Mr. Blair who had been telegraphed by [illegible] to notify the man's relatives and forward instructions regarding disposition of the body.

COUNTY TAX RATE IS SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS

Fiscal Court Makes Levy Same as Last Year—Sheriff Makes Full Settlement in Cash

The county tax rate was fixed at seventy-five cents for each hundred dollars in property at the fiscal court meeting at Pineville yesterday. This is the same rate as was levied last year. Fifty cents of this will go for general county purposes and the remaining twenty five cents will be used for interest payments on bonds.

In districts where common schools are not supported by a town or city a levy was made for the support of such schools.

The county will support the health unit entirely at its own expense this year. The city, state and federal governments had promised support but have failed to do so, imposing the burden on the county.

Sheriff Martin Green made his settlement to the fiscal court. It was the first time that a sheriff in this county has ever turned over he full amount of collections in cash to the treasurer.

A THOUGHT

The simple inherit folly but the prudent are crowned with knowledge—Prov. 14:18

Wisdom consists not in seeing what is directly before us but in discerning those things which may come to pass—Terence

TAKING CARE OF THE NEW STREETS

We hear these days when good streets for Middlesboro bid fair to become a reality many things about what kind of streets we want and what kind do not and what the city should do and what it should not do. Surely these advisers are losing sight of the most important thing, and that is the care of the street after it is put down.

Of course a street must be made of good material with a good base but this need not necessarily be the most expensive on the market because there is no material which will not wear out if it is not cared for. But there is no reason why the asphalt streets to be built in Middlesboro may not last indefinitely if they are kept clean and are patched immediately when little holes comes in them.

Cumberland Avenue which is now being reconstructed is a comparatively new street. But the city after having the avenue seemed to think it had finished its work. The streets have never been kept clean. Dirt sand and little rocks were allowed to accumulate. Constant travel over these soon wore holes in the asphalt as it would in concrete or any thing else. The little holes were neglected and gradually grew larger and larger until we had the frightful condition in streets which we have endured for some time now.

Let us insist above all other things when the new streets are finished that they be taken care of. It is a necessary economy that definite provision be made to keep the streets clean and from the fact of the improvement in sanitation and civic appearance this would make, and that the holes that are bound to come in the asphalt be patched at once instead of waiting until they become the pot holes that now mar our streets.

WHY FAIL IN LIFE

Success is easier to attain than failure wrote Ed Howe the retired editor and country town philosopher of Potato Hill Farm near Atchison, Kansas. Right are we as for the real failure is harder on us than the road to success.

Ed Howe's philosophy is that success after all is not as difficult to be it is most of us waste so much time seeking an impossible short cut to attain instead of following the old tried and true way—hard work patience perseverance and common honesty.

One of our national weaknesses is our many hot headed impatience. We never be satisfied until we can all have our cake and eat it too. We can discard with no pity for a pocket size radio with its batteries and make life an endless period of prosperity without the haunting spectre of depression.

Still that's the right attitude in the sense that it's the only way we'll attain the perfections we crave.

American mentality does not limit that anything is impossible especially where it applies personally to the individual. If we had half the confidence in our individual selves that we have in our head or social group it wouldn't be necessary to talk so much about how to succeed.

To the ambitious it often seems that life is an unending series of failures. Success is the sum total of these failures. This angle of the discussion is furnished by President Lowell of Harvard.

He adds: "It has been asserted by military critics that Napoleon was finally beaten in war until he had himself beaten. What is sometimes said that Edison lives because his inventions failed until he knows that he has found

The man who rushes ahead and tells all the same time with the kind of the process. He shows perseverance but not determination. Wisdom consists in learning the right the result of experience.

In other words by butting the head against parts of the wall until we find a weak spot instead of repeating at the same point of attack.

The career of most great men proves that success comes only after a series of failures. Abraham Lincoln in his commercial days tried to be a successful storekeeper at which venture he failed twice. Goodyear failed at thousand of experiments before he discovered how to make rubber commercially useful and profitable.

William Jennings Bryan succeeded as an orator than as a leader but wound up successfully as a psychologist and philosopher.

So it goes. When failure becomes chronic it's often because we attacking the wrong part of the wall—trying to succeed at the wrong vocation. For every person in the world there is some line of work at which he is certain to be highly successful. The job is to find it. Instinct will guide us much more surely than reason.

...an for Combat-...exican Bean Beetle

...control ...eetle from the U. S. ...griculture Bureau of ... is compiled by the ...rge of the government

...n bean beetle (Epilachna ...rupa Mals) is the most serious ...eet enemy of garden beans in portions of the United States which it inhabits. Long present in the Southwest, it has within the past few years made its appearance in the southeastern United States and now covers portions of six states in that section, including Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, and South Carolina. It is spreading northward rapidly and may, in the course of a few years, materially extend its range northward.

The adult insect or beetle is copper colored, bears eight black spots on each wing-cover, and measures about one-fourth on an inch in length. Newly emerged specimens are lemon colored. The female lays orange-yellow eggs in clusters of from 40 to 60 on the lower surface of the leaves, and these hatch in 5 to 7 days during summer into small spiny orange-yellow larvae, which molt three times, gradually becoming larger until they are about one-third of an inch in length. The larva transforms to the pupa or inactive stage on the under surface of the leaf, or on weeds or objects nearby, and emerges as an adult or beetle in 5 or 6 days, making a total from egg to adult of 25 to 28 days during the summer in Alabama. A maximum of four generations occurred in 1921.

The adult and larvae feed on the under surface of bean leaves, leaving a characteristic net work of tissue, which soon dries up. Beans are destroyed in 2 or 3 weeks when beetles are abundant.

The control of the Mexican bean beetle requires careful effort. It has been developed that a high grade of tri-calcium arsenate, diluted with 9 parts of hydrated (or plasterers') lime is effective when applied as a dust to the under surfaces of the leaves. In gardens, small dusters are useful. On large patches, a knapsack type of bellows dusters with spout attached to a flexible hose is the best machine. The fan type or cotton or tobacco duster gives fair results if the discharge tube is turned sidewise so as to direct the dust into the foliage.

The application should be made evenly and not too heavily, care being exercised to reach the under surfaces. From one to four applications are necessary for bush varieties, depending upon the degree of infestations. When beetles are very abundant, the planting of pole beans is not recommended, because of the large number of treatments necessary and the difficulty of applying them.

A mixture of high grade calcium arsenate 1 part, dusting sulphur 1 part, and hydrated lime 4 parts has been recommended by the Alabama Experiment Station and used satisfactorily by the Bureau of Entomology. During hot weather the amount of hydrated lime may be doubled to insure against foliage injury.

Where obtainable, magnesium arsenate, used as a spray at the rate of 1 pound to 50 gallons of water, or 1 ounce to 3 gallons, is quite effective and does not injure bean foliage. When used as a dust it may be diluted with from one to five parts of hydrated lime.

Bean foliage is extremely susceptible to insecticide injury in the form of burning or scalding, hence the careless use of arsenicals may result in the total destruction of a bean crop. Paris green should never be used on bean foliage under any circumstances and arsenate of lead is unsafe for use in the Southeastern United States. Zinc arsenate, while not so injurious as lead arsenate, is inferior to the arsenicals mentioned above.

If snap beans treated with arsenicals are washed thoroughly before eating, no danger of poisoning will result.

DES MOINES HOST TO WORLD CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING

By Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa., July 5.—Des Moines has completed preparations for the entertainment of more than 25,000 visitors during the 29th international Christian Endeavor convention, to be held here July 4 to 9. The convention, it is said, will be one of the largest religious gatherings of the year. The delegations alone will number nearly 15,000.

William J. Bryan, William G. McAdoo, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor; Sherwood Eddy, Gipsy Smith, Dr. Francis E. Clark and SirLionel Fletcher are among the widely known speakers slated to address various sessions. Mr. Bryan's address is to be given at the state fair grounds, Sunday, July 8.

A great parade of delegates on Saturday evening July 7 will be the spectacle of the convention. Accompanied by bands and guards, state delegations will march in costume and representatives of foreign countries in native dress.

Fifteen platforms will be erected in downtown streets to accommodate huge street meetings which are to be features of the convention program.

A temple of Fine Arts, temporarily erected in a downtown church by Professor H. Augustine Smith, of Boston University, will have on display during the convention session 500 famous old prints.

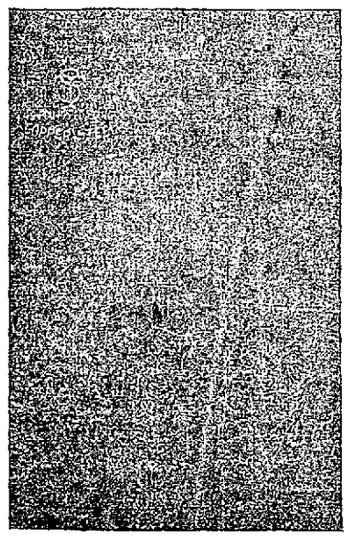
Enduring Protection Against The Elements

Most any roofing material will afford protection temporarily. But the baking suns, pouring rains and destructive snow and ice will soon play havoc with a roof that is not covered with enduring material, resulting soon in costly repairs and patches and, all too soon, another roof.



Stanley & McAffry, tinners of long experience, in building their new shop, wanted a roof they knew would last. So they selected

S. & T. Old Time
Because it Endures

One good roof is much cheaper than two or three cheap ones. S & T Old Time Roofing Plate has been on the market for many years and has passed the time-test. Its quality is proven. There is no better roofing. A house covered with S. & T. Old Time reflects the good judgment of its owner.

S. & T. Old Time is carried in stock and highly recommended by Stanley & McAffry. Ask them to tell you why it is better than any other roofing material.

This Dress Comes From the Melting Pot of Style

You take a stiff self conscious Eton boy and pompadour toreador and mix them and their go tames up allow the mixture to simmer awhile in the brain of some such Parisian fashion expert as Henri Creange and pour out to cool. As soon as it is cool enough to try on you will find a delightful blending of styles into an afternoon frock with the flirtation only a conception from Paris has let as imagine a too ever thought the rabbit that came out of the top hat was.

The Eton comes out in this dress of knee length over the short jacket front opening over a vest of plain sheer organdie. The dashing Spanish touch appears in the belt which is draped in a swinging low line about the hips. The wrap around skirt comes to an end in a drape shorter than the hem that is caught in shirrings in a way to suggest smocking.

Rather wide sleeves are [illegible] not until they fit [illegible] about the lower arm but flare into an attractive cuff. The formal influences are at work only in the front—the back is plain merely bloused above the fold of the sash.

White organdy makes a party band and bow around the felt hat.

Hoover beating is effective because it is swift and continuous. It is not severe. The action of The Hoover, as it beats out the deeply lodged dirt, is entirely harmless.

Hoover sweeping quickly gathers up even the stubbornest clinging thread, hair, lint, and litter. At the same time, the nap is straightened and the colors brightened. Hoover-cleaned rugs are actually guaranteed to wear years longer because they are harmlessly beaten, swept and suction-cleaned immaculately free from destructive nap-cutting dirt.
